Problem

Last-minute pitches create an organizer bottleneck.

Organizers

- Hours of repetitive, basic checks
- Right before deadlines
- Extreme time pressure

Founders

- No immediate feedback on slide content
- No feedback on spoken delivery

From real organizer experience

Target audience

Founders use it. Organizers pay.

Primary users

Founders

- Startup founders and hackathon participants
- Rehearsing pitches
- Feedback linked to slides and video timestamps

Paying customers

Organizers

- Hackathons, accelerators, incubators
- University programs
- Fewer repetitive reviews for judges and mentors

Three pillars of analysis

Three checks: deck, pitch, sync.

Deck check

- Slide clarity
- Required sections
- Missing content flags
- Visual readability

Pitch check

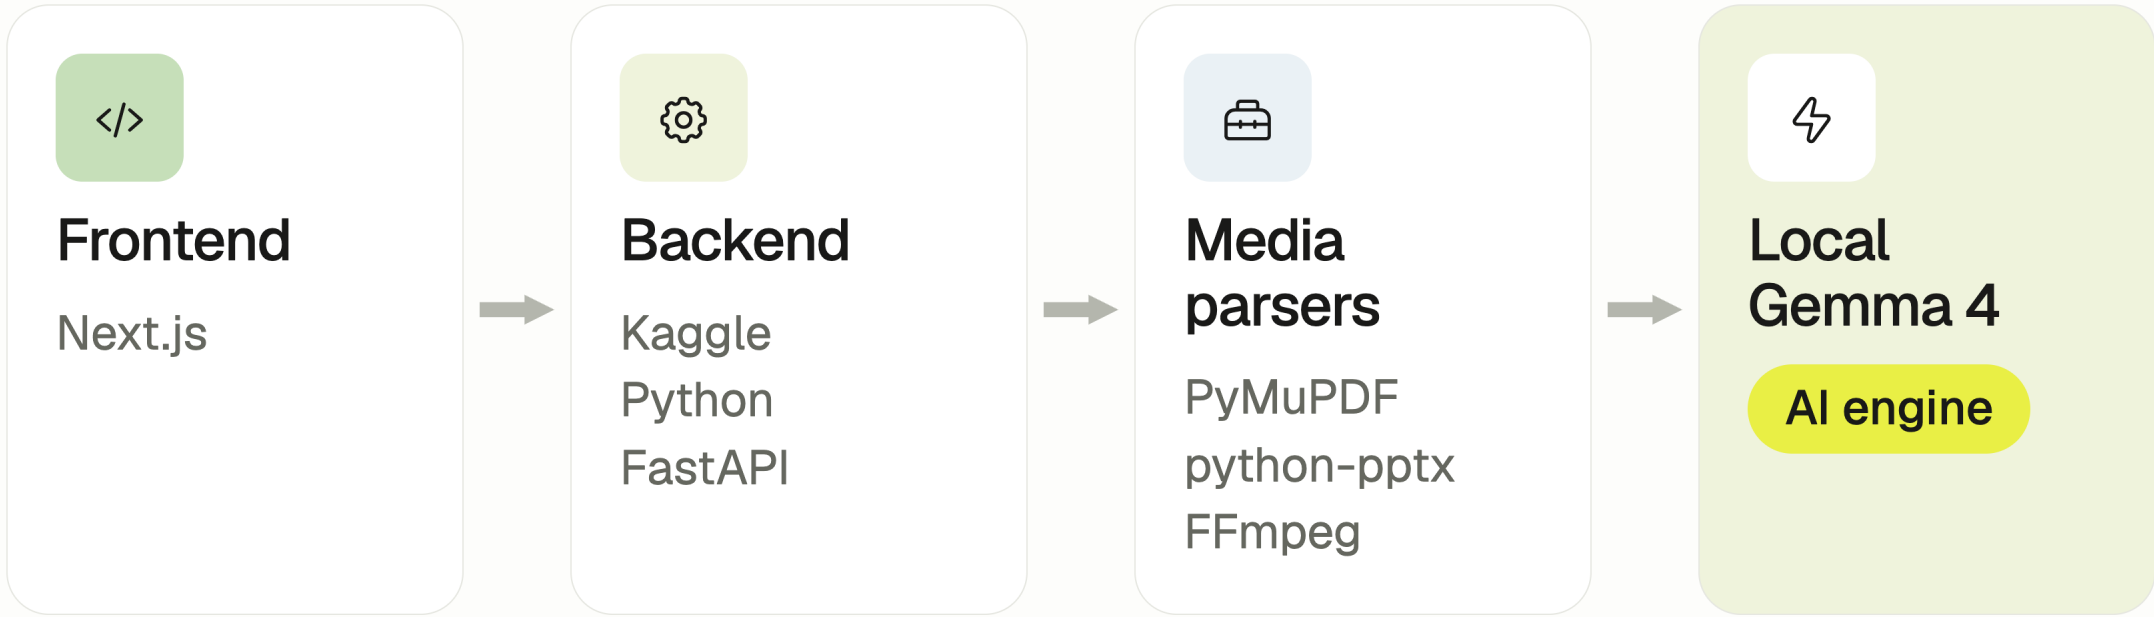

- Clarity and pacing
- Speech pause tracking
- Repetition detection
- Presentation timing

Sync check

- Narrative vs. slides
- Inconsistency alerts
- Unsupported statements

Architecture

FastAPI backend powers local Gemma 4.

Privacy

Gemma 4 keeps every pitch private.

Local processing

Processed locally

- Confidential decks and unreleased ideas
- Never sent to external AI services

Google Gemma 4

- Multimodal model at the core
- Advanced AI that improves the event experience

Scale

Scaling

Cost and scale

- Scales per event
- Enables multi-region expansion

Future

Beyond hackathons

- Sales presentations
- Educational talks
- Public speaking coaching

Monetization model

Organizers pay. Founders use it free.

Our model

B2B event licensing

- Fee per event or accelerator cohort
- Institutions pay, free for founders
- Massive time savings for organizers

Models we avoid

- Enterprise SaaS
- Founder subscription
- Freemium B2C

Competition

Others check parts. We check all three.

Deck reviewers

- PitchBob, GoPresent
- Slides, not delivery
- Cloud processing

Speech coaches

- Yoodli, Orai, PitchPilote
- PitchPilote adds sync
- Mostly cloud

Organizer tools

- DoraHacks, Devfolio
- Text, docs and code
- Not the spoken pitch

PitchCheck: deck + pitch + sync, processed locally
